'Very large' cash drop to Petrolia reserve

Heather Wright The Independent

Almos Tassonyi says the $1.5 million the Town of Petrolia plans to put into its working capital reserve is "large...very large."

Tassonyi, a Research Associate, International Property Tax Institute who is affiliated with the School of Public Policy at the University of Calgary, should know what he's looking at. He was a senior economist with the Ontario Ministry of Finance until 2011. The Independent asked Tassonyi about the town's plans to put about 20 per cent of the tax revenue it collects this year into a working capital reserve fund established in 2014.

When it was established taxes climbed eight per cent to pay for the $500,000 fund. Town officials had a goal of paying for all of the town's capital projects from it.

But a graph by staff in the draft budget book shows the town didn't spend the full amount in that year. It left over $132,000 in the reserve in 2014. Since then it has grown by 30 times that amount to just under $4 million by the end of 2020. In all, the town had $7,992,400 in reserves at the end of December 2020. Some are for specific projects, but the working capital reserve doesn't. Tassonyi looked over the town's financial records and says the $1.5 million is unusual.

Investigation at Petrolia's town hall

Heather Wright The Independent

John Fleming has returned to Petrolia to probe a conflict between staff and a member of council, The Independent has learned.

Fleming was first appointed by Petrolia's Integrity Commissioner in 2017 to investigate after The Independent revealed the then Chief Administrative Officer owned two buildings being rented by the town for storage and a youth centre. Fleming visited Petrolia again this week to investigate an internal conflict.

While Petrolia Mayor Brad Loosley would not comment on the investigation, saying the matter was dealt with behind closed doors, The Independent has learned Fleming is interviewing members of staff and council about a matter which was hashed over in a private meeting of council Sept. 13.

Council then met privately for over an hour. The mayor reported publicly, according to the meeting minutes; "Council was advised of a recent event regarding a staff/council relations concern...Our CAO will be reviewing policies and procedures with staff. Council have directed the CAO, who is ultimately responsible for staff, to gather further information and report back to council when able."

It's not clear how long the investigation will take nor whether the issues surrounding the conflict will be revealed by council.

Petrolia man stabbed during Halloween party

Heather Wright The Independent

Lambton OPP are still looking for the people who stabbed a Petrolia man at a Halloween party on the weekend.

Officials released the first information about the stabbing Tuesday morning saying "Officers arrived on scene and observed an to hospital by Lambton EMS.

'Members of the Lambton County OPP Crime Unit and Forensic Identification Services are investigating the incident. "No arrests have been made at this time." Sources tell The Independent the young man was hosting a party at his parent's home on Grove St. Saturda

The host didn't know them, had not invited them and asked them to leave.

As he was escorting them from the backyard to their vehicle, the young man was stabbed six times. He was taken to hospital in London where he was recovering Monday.

OPP have not said how many people they are looking for, if police know who

Petrolia council rejects bid to eliminate tax increase

Heather Wright The Independent

Petrolia council is bringing a $7.4 million budget with a two per cent tax increase to ratepayers Nov. 8.

That's a half per cent lower than municipal administrators presented in the draft budget Friday - about $30,000 less.

But one councillor is concerned residents are going to be in for a big shock beyond the extra $24 per $100,000 of assessment planned. Wade Deighton wanted council to take $150,000 out of the budget to eliminate a municipal tax increase saying homeowners will soon see their tax assessment soar because of the rising housing prices.

Homeowners now pay taxes on what their home's market value was in 2016. The Municipal Property Assessment Corporation has delayed adjusting the rates for the last two years because of the economic impact of COVID-19.

Real estate values have gone through the roof since then. For example, the Sarnia-Lambton Real Estate Board reported in Sept. 2016, the average price of a single family home was $232,000. By Sept. 2021, that same house was selling for $504,529 – a 54 per cent increase in value.

Petrolia CAO Rick Charlebois acknowledged that Ontarians are past due for a tax reassessment, however he's hopeful the province will kick it down the line at least another year.

If it doesn't, Deighton says there are going to be a lot of people "freaking out" when they open their tax bill. And he says increasing Petrolia's municipal taxes makes the problem worse. He raised the issue with councillors as they deliberated the budget Friday morning. At the time, council was considering leaving the budget as presented by staff.

"When they approve a two-and-a-half per cent increase, that's what they're signing people up for – it's a two-and-a half per cent increase on a 30 per cent (assessment) increase...That's a scary figure. You start talking about houses in Petrolia that are going to be paying upwards of $15,000 taxes."

Charlebois suggested the tax increase could be eliminated without cutting services. He told councillors the effect of cutting the $150,000 would be the town would not put as much money in its working capital reserve this year.

The CAO/Treasurer told council he has drafted the budget so that during the 2022 tax year at least $1.5 million more would be added to the working capital reserve. The CAO said if the tax increase was eliminated, as Deighton suggested, $1.3 million would be contributed instead.

Councillors painted a different picture of what might happen if the tax increase were eliminated. "I just don't believe it's realistic to start to slash services," said Councillor Joel Field. "And, I believe that we would have to do that; I don't see that we have that kind of money and pencil and paper.

"We will have growth, but if we don't maintain what we're doing right now and continue on the path of plans that we have, I think that we're setting ourselves up for failure."

Councillor Don Welten agreed. "I'm not in favor of changing anything because I think the staff has done a great job. We have a great town, everything's going good. And I've been in budgets before where they slashed it down to nothing and all of a sudden you've got some expenses you have to do," he told council. "I strongly oppose changing this budget down to zero per cent. I have great respect for our staff, they do a great job...we should stick to the budget which has been presented."

Councillor Ross O'Hara also expressed concern about the idea. "We have to realize that wages have gone up a certain amount. And we've all been told over and over again, how a lot of things that we plan to purchase, because of COVID have gotten more expensive," said O'Hara.

Since the pandemic began, the town has received at least $744,000 in COVID-19 relief funds from the provincial government to cover those costs.

"I guess I'm comfortable with the way the budget sits at two-and-a-half per cent," says O'Hara.

O'Hara, Welton, Field and Loosley all voted against eliminating the municipal tax increase. Deighton and Councillor Marty Souch were in favour. Councillor Grant Purdy did not attend the budget session.

Instead, council agreed to trim a half per cent from the increase – about $30,000.

As it sits now, municipal taxes will rise about $24 for every $100,000 of assessment. With the average single family dwelling selling for around $502,000 that will mean about $120 more per year with the municipal tax bill being about $4,925 and the total tax bill with county and education taxes estimated at $7,960. Councillors also approved water and sewage increases of 2.5 per cent each. The budget will be presented to the public at a virtual meeting Nov. 8.

Working capital contribution seems 'very large' amount of money placed in reserves "does seem

Tassonyi viewed the town's Financial Information Return prepared for the province and was surprised by the "blips" in the amount of money the town collected. Over the last five years, Petrolia has received millions in grants for a water treatment plant and upgrades to the drinking water plant. But Tassonyi noted "the tax increases have been pretty steady... when I look at total taxation revenue." And he noted the amount of money placed in reserves "does seem very large when you're talking about something like $1.5 million compared to nearly $6 million (in operating revenues)."

Tassonyi says while it is up to council and there are no hard and fast rules, he says a "reasonable" contribution to reserves is between one and five per cent "depending on the size of the municipality and what the implications on the tax rate are." Have we become so morally insensitive, we can't discern the way? Do the gods of materialism, egotism and power, rule the day? Have we deceived our next generation, being politically correct? ## Citizens, politicians want Campbell House saved

Brooke-Alvinston council doesn't want the former home of AW Campbell torn down.

In September, the St. Clair Region Conservation Authority voted to take down the home of the man who donated the 308 acres which has become the park bearing his name.

The authority opened the Campbell House Museum in the early 1970s. The 1800's farmhouse was open a few days a week in the summer months. In the 1980s, a provincial grant for the museum ended. It would only operate during the annual Maple Syrup Festival. In 2001, the museum was broken into and thieves stole the most valuable artifacts. It never reopened.

Greg Wilcox, the manager of conservation areas, says there are "holes in the roof, holes in the floors. I don't even like to walk up the stairs to look at the items upstairs. It's in really poor condition."

Deputy Mayor Frank Nemcek says once people saw the news in The Independent, he started getting calls from people angry the building may come down. Local historians voiced their concerns online. Kevin Edwards says it's "pretty sad."

"AW was born and died in that house and it was built by his parents - in the 1870s - who settled the land. It is the last original farmhouse in the area."

Dawn McNally wrote to the conservation authority hoping to change minds.

'Too many buildings of value have been torn down at this park I feel this is one that does need to be saved," says McNally. "As a small child, I visited Mr. Campbell with my dad, John Leitch, and feel Mr. Campbell left you a gem of a property... I think this needs to be revisited and looked at in a different way. Preserve the history of the park."

Councillor Wayne Deans went into the building with Wilcox Oct. 27 to take a look. "Yeah, it was in rough shape," he told council Thursday. "I blame the conservation authority for not doing the upkeep." Deans says there was a hole in the wall which should have been boarded up long ago. Racoons went into the building making a mess.

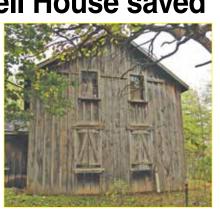

But he also told council there were still lots of artifacts - including photos and an old spinning wheel - which were inside.

"I would like to see a letter sent from the municipality to save it," says Deans.

Councillor Jamie Armstrong agreed saying it may never be a museum again, but the house should remain standing. "At least have the building there so people can still see it... it's not like they're going to put a high rise there."

To me, it is an historic building," said Mayor Dave Ferguson. He suggested the letter should ask for dialogue between the authority and the municipality aiming to keep the building standing.

Armstrong suggested members of the community might be willing to donate money to repair the building so it could remain. Council agreed to send a letter asking for discussions about the historic home. Nemcek warned the conservation authority is ready to act. "If we're going to do this, do it right away because it is on the agenda to come down," he said. "The fire department was asked if they wanted to do a controlled burn."

Deans says it's important to preserve the Campbell House particularly since the nature centre and the sugar shack are also gone. "It will be the last thing there (from the family), everything else will have been torn down."

Hours after the council meeting, local artist Liana Russwurm said she had commitments for $500. by Nov. 2, there was about $1,500 and an online petition calling for the conservation authority to put their plans on hold had 500 names. She's also had contractors volunteer to help repair the building. She wants to see Campbell House fixed. "The Campbells donated it to them in good faith; the conservation authority should have taken care of it."

Restauranteurs worry as server wage hits $15

Heather Wright The Independent

At least one Petrolia restaurant owner says the price for a meal out will likely go up after the province announced minimum wage will go up to $15 in January.

Premier Doug Ford made the announcement Tuesday, three years after cancelling the increase to $15 per hour planned by the Liberal government. Ford cited the increased cost of living because of the pandemic as one of the reasons for the 65 cent per hour increase.

For restaurant servers, the increase will make even more of a difference - their wage goes from $12.55 to $15 on Jan. 1.

Brian Dunlop of Actors in Petrolia, says that 20 per cent wage increase is tough. And it will affect the cost of eating out. "We will have to do an increase and people think we're expensive now."

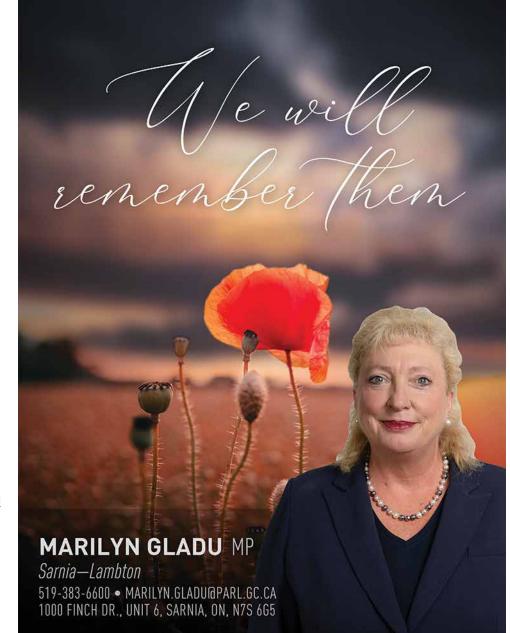

The restaurant industry has been treading water through the pandemic. The Ontario Chamber of Commerce called for the government to look at things like debt forgiveness so the small businesses can pay for the increase.

Dunlop says while the increase will have an affect, it won't cost him as much as it would have in 2018, simply because he has about 16 fewer employees now.

While businesses wondered how they would find the cash for the increase, labour leaders, who stood with the premier at the news conference, signalled this is only the beginning.

"Is $15 an hour wonderful, no," said Jerry Diaz of Unifor. "Do I think it is a good start? Yes.'

Diaz pointed out a living wage in Toronto is about $20 per hour. NDP Leader Andrea Horwath said the minimum wage should rise to $17 an hour.

Four way stop considered for Marthaville/Aberfeldy

Heather Wright The Independent

Dawn-Euphemia officials are going to take a look at the corner of Aberfeldy Line and Marthaville Road after an accident claimed the life of a Dresden woman.

Sandra McDougall, 59, an Enbridge Gas employee died Sept. 10 when her vehicle struck a pickup truck at the corner. This intersection has been the site of a deadly accident before. In Nov. 2015, a Lambton county teacher was killed in an accident at the very corner on her way to school.

Councillor Mark McGuire asked township staff to take a look at the intersection to see if there is anything that can be done to improve it. McGuire says people "just fly down there."

He suggested a four way stop. Administration says the intersection is well marked and normally the township follows Ministry of Transportation rules. Mayor Al Broad says there are guidelines for a four way stop.

"We do tend to follow the county and their guidelines. But again, I like to remind everybody that those are just guidelines, and sometimes guidelines don't always work. And sometimes the guidelines need just a little tweak every once in a while," added Broad. "Because that's all they are - just a guideline."

Enbridge Gas recently donated several thousand dollars for road safety improvements which may be used on the project.

Too much of a good thing

Petrolia's working capital reserve is too much of a good thing.

The town set up this reserve in 2014 with the specific purpose of paying for whatever capital projects were needed; new roads, new windows, soccer pitches, whatever could be imagined. It started the reserve by collecting an extra $500,000 from local taxpayers.

The move was met with howls of protest, but council did what it thought was best and started the fund.

Reserves are a necessary part of municipal government. Communities have to have cash on hand to pay for some of the big projects or unexpected problems. But there are many problems with THIS reserve.

First; the town shouldn't have raised taxes to start it. It could have simply established it by using the surpluses it was generating on the budget. That's how Lambton County funds what some politicians call the "Hopes and Dreams" fund.

Second, municipalities have always set aside money for specific capital projects. For example, Victoria Playhouse Petrolia has over $500,000 set aside for capital now. But that money can only be spent on capital for the playhouse. Petrolia's working reserve can be for literally any capital project. That means administrators can change their minds about what projects should have priority. The town does asset management plans to make sure capital projects are done at the right time and not switched up at the will of administration and council.

But the biggest problem with the working capital fund is the wads of cash the town is now dumping into it. As of the end of 2020 - ten months ago - there was just under $4 million. This coming budget, council has tentatively given approval to drop another $1.5 million in it. They're going to take $1.5 million - about 20 per cent of all the revenue collected from taxpayers pockets - and dump it into a savings account without telling us how it will be used or when. And council will do it again in 2022 if citizens allow it.

Some councillors suggested cutting $150,000 from the budget would mean 'slashing services.' Poppycock.

Petrolia could cut $500,000 without reducing operating costs at all, give taxpayers a huge break and still put $1 million away from the future. The town's treasurer said as much during the budget. Council just wasn't listening.

Our Story

This Louis Pesha image is of the Anderson and Murray Machine Shop which was built in 1880 in Oil Springs. This shop sold a wide variety of new and second-hand machinery, and the shop's owners specialized in repairs relating to oil wells and drilling equipment. The business has been managed by many different owners throughout the years and in 1947 the machine shop was purchased by the Watson family who converted the building into a hardware and chainsaw repair store. It has closed but the original building remains unused.

There is a future for Alvinston's Campbell House

At first glance, Campbell House seems beyond repair.

The batten board walls are rotting at the bottom, windows - both high and low - are smashed. The only glimpse inside the building from the front door window reveals little, other than the decay of a building left for far too long without a good cleaning and rudimentary repairs.

As Brooke-Alvinston council passed a motion asking for the St. Clair Region Conservation Authority to reconsider tearing it down - my heart was with them. I love old buildings. But when has rot decayed the promise of renewal.

I thought about that when I was talk trails at AW Campbell Conservation Area, when Archie Campbell decided the 308 acres should be preserved. She has fond memories of visiting Mr. Campbell with her dad and the gem the turn of the century farmhouse once was. She wants it restored.

I told her about the old building I grew up beside - the Marsh Store in Coldstream. In my mind's eye, I can still see it, grey board and tin roof, looking like it might fall over.

I also remember my parents talking about how ridiculous it was the store was being restored. It was, they thought, a waste of money at the time.

The group behind the restoration was the St. Clair Region Conservation Authority. Once the work was done, I loved going through the old store looking at the exhibits about nature there. The authority eventually sold it. It became a tea house, restaurant and quilt shop

Brooke-Alvinston's legal bill for farm fight nearly $60K

Heather Wright The Independent

Brooke-Alvinston has spent 60 per cent more than it planned defending itself at a Natural Farm Practices Protection Board hearing.

Buurma Farms filed three applications with the board against Brooke-Alvinston, Dawn-Euphemia and Warwick Township over their regulations surrounding the storage of farm fertilizers. Buurma Farms, which is affliated with LaSalle Agri, a fertilizer company, was storing large amounts of the pungent biosolids on farmland in the area, a practice which all three municipalities have rules against. The application against Brooke-Alvinston's rules was heard first in the spring of 2021. The board agreed an operation like Buurma Farms would be likely to store large amounts of fertilizer in one place. However it noted the fertilizer made from human waste required a better storage facility which ensured it was covered to keep down the smell and reduce the risk of fire.

After the ruling, Buurma Farms asked the board to order the municipality to pay its legal fees. That was turned down, but cost the municipality ### over $11,000 to deal with.

In a report to council, Treasurer Stephen Ikert says it appears Brooke-Alvinston's legal issues are now complete.

'The total cost of all legal fees to defend our position including the first review with all three municipalities, the pre-hearing meetings, the hearing and the appeal come to $176,601.68. The cost will be split three ways -$58,867.23 each. Brooke-Alvinston budgeted $20,000 for the legal fight."

Ikert says Brooke-Alvinston may incur more costs if the other applications move forward.

A Sarnia father will spend eight years behind bars after sexually assaulting his daughter for a decade.

The man, who cannot be named to protect his daughter's identity, admitted to raping his daughter on four different occasions, starting when she was eight until she was 17. When the daughter told her uncle what was happening he took his brother to the police station to confess. He appeared in Sarnia Court Nov. 2 for sentencing and listened to the impact of his crime.

"All through my life I thought this was normal... I always thought it was my fault. Even though I've been told it isn't, I still do. I cry a lot thinking about it. Why can't I have a normal dad?'

"Maybe if I talked sooner I wouldn't have gone through so much pain, but I was scared for my family.

"I no longer want to have a relationship with him nor do I want to see him," she says.

The man spoke briefly.. "I love my daughter very much. In spite of what has happened I never intended to hurt her.

"I accept the punishment that's going to come and I'll come out of this a better man."

Punishment in cases of sexual assault against children has dramatically shifted under the Tougher Penalties for Child Predators Act from 2015. Sexual offences against children which would see sentences of four to six years now see double that.

Justice Deborah Austin in sentencing the father said the Supreme Court has set a standard which sends a "strong message that sexual offences against children are violent crimes that wrongfully exploit children's vulnerability and cause profound harm to children, families and communities.

The man will also be on the sex offender registry for life and cannot contact his daughter or be within two kilometres of her.

The Poppy should be worn with respect on the left side, over the heart. The Legion's lapel Poppy is a sacred symbol of Remembrance and should not be affixed with any pin that obstructs the Poppy. Also available through some Branches is the Legion's reusable black centre Poppy pin to affix your lapel on November 11. Some choose to remove their Poppy at the conclusion of the ceremony and place their Poppy on the cenotaph or on a wreath as a sign of respect. This has become a poignant tradition each year at the National Remembrance Day Ceremony in Ottawa as thousands of Poppies are placed on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. When a Poppy is removed, it should be stored appropriately or it may be disposed of respectfully. We encourage anyone who finds a Poppy that has fallen to the ground to pick it up and brush it off so that it can be kept or disposed of respectfully.

While Poppies are always free, The Royal Canadian Legion gratefully accepts donations to the Poppy Fund, which directly supports Canada's Veterans and their families in need.

LTC critics question new rules; province hasn't fined owners before won't now

Heather Wright The Independent

The province's new long term care act could lead to $1 million fines for home operators who don't follow the rules.

The Ontario Health Care Coalition says the change has "potential" but in the last three years the Ford government hasn't used the powers it already has to fine operators despite thousands of seniors dying during the COVID-19 pandemic because of poor procedures and lack of care.

Rod Phillips, the minister of long term care, introduced the legislation saying in a news release "the plan is built on three pillars: staffing and care; accountability, enforcement, and transparency; and building modern, safe, comfortable homes for seniors." One of the most anticipated pieces of the legislation is the enforcement of the act. During the pandemic, horrific conditions came to light when the Canadian army moved into long term care homes to help overwhelmed staff.

Phillips says the new act will establish new compliance and enforcement tools, including doubling fines on the conviction of an offence under the proposed legislation. It also introduces a minister's review of a director's decision in the licensing process.

"This legislation, if passed, would protect our progress by supporting our commitments to increase staffing for more hours of direct care, enhance accountability, and build more modern beds," says Phillips.

The health coalition, a vocal critic of the government's handling of long term care, says Ontario already had the authority to issue fines.

"This government has for three years done nothing to hold any of the terrible operators to account despite already having the powers in the act to fine, have provincial offenses charged, suspend licenses, revoke licenses, appoint management to take over the homes and stop new admissions," executive director Natalie Mehra writes after reviewing the legislation.

"Doubling fines sounds great but the existing hefty fines – $100,000 per home or penalties for provincial offenses - have never been enforced and the Ford government has been sitting on them without enacting or using them since it took office.'

Phillips says the proposed act also establishes the commitment for four hours of care by 2035. Mehra points out that in the legislation it is a "target" and unenforceable.

"What improvements that could have and should have happened are far more than the changes that they have made," she says.

Mehra adds the province did nothing to encourage a move to non-profit long term care homes. The health care coalition has been advocating for non-profit care.

"They have dropped the requirement that the government promote the delivery of long-term care by non-profit organizations. They added in 'and mission driven' which are weasel words for for-profit owned facilities.

"It is a gaping loophole that allows all the for-profits through, and of course we already know that the Ford government is midstream in awarding thousands of new beds to the same for-profit chains.

"This is a major loss and is not in the public interest."

Bluewater Health officials say 18 staff members will lose their jobs because they won't be vaccinated against COVID-19. That's less than one per cent of the staff.

Bluewater Health and other hospitals in the region made vaccination against the virus mandatory in September, giving employees until the end of October to be fully vaccinated.

Julia Oosterman, chief of communications, says as of Oct. 31, 99 per cent of employees and professional staff, including doctors, dentists and midwives, are fully vaccinated.

Another 18 people have not complied with the policy - four of those people work in full time clinical roles, including nursing and physicians. Oosterman says 25 others have been given a limited time to complete their vaccine series to return to work. When Bluewater Health chose to make vaccines mandatory, there was concern the hospital would be left short staffed at a time when it is already difficult to find trained medical staff. Premier Doug Ford as recently as Friday, has said he is concerned about losing staff.

Oosterman says the vacancies shouldn't mean a reduction in services "On any given day, it's not unusual for us to have 20 to 30 employees call in sick; we have 1,900 people in the building...so it's a very low percentage.

"It's very much manageable. On top of that, we've also been recruiting for these positions."

A quarter of Catholic occasional staff, bus drivers not vaxxed Heather Wright There are 145 occasional and temporary The Independent

About a quarter of Lambton Catholic school board occasional, temporary and bus drivers aren't yet vaccinated.

Each school board in Ontario has to publicly report the vaccination rates within their schools. At the St. Clair District Catholic School Board about 92 per cent of all school employees - like full time teachers and support staff – are fully vaccinated against COVID-19 or have their first shot.

But the rate of vaccination is much lower for occasional and temporary teachers and what the board calls other individuals, regular volunteers in the schools and bus drivers included. The board has 1,068 people in those categories and about 75 per cent of them have reported their vaccine status to the board.

teachers and 191 individuals who either are not vaccinated or haven't submitted their vaccine status yet - about 17 per cent of the people working in Catholic schools in the region.

The Lambton-Kent District School Board has far fewer outstanding vaccine status reports with just two per cent of the reports outstanding from the 3,105 people who work in schools.

The occasional and temporary teachers are 83.7 per cent vaccinated and 84 per cent of other individuals, including volunteers and school bus drivers, are vaccinated.

Right now, there are 13 people – mostly elementary school students - in Lambton County schools who have COVID-19. Lambton Public Health believes the virus is being spread at Queen Elizabeth II in Petrolia where three students and one staff member are ill. An outbreak has been declared there.

On November 11 Imperial remembers

We remember Imperial employees like Wallace Carman Horley who made the ultimate sacrifice. Before enlisting in the naval reserve in 1942, Wallace was a pipe fitter at the Sarnia refinery. In January 1944, he was assigned to the crew of the HMCS Alberni and served in the Battle of the Atlantic. On August 21, 1944, the ship was struck by a torpedo fired by a German submarine. Four officers and 55 crew members were lost in the attack, including Wallace. Later that month, Walter and Rachel Horley in Sarnia received a telegram informing them their 22-year old son was missing at sea. Four months later, Wallace was officially listed as missing and presumed dead.

Traditional Santa parade – with precautions – in Petrolia The Independent

Petrolia's Santa Claus Parade is returning to downtown Petrolia.

Last year, the town held a drive-by parade, with floats moving through the community over a course of a couple of hours since crowds were not able to gather. But as people are vaccinated and the number of people being infected with the virus decreases, the province eased the limit of 100 people outdoors for parades.

Petrolia officials announced Oct. 28 this year's parade "All the Colours of Christmas" will be Sat. Dec. 4 at 2 pm in the downtown.

Before the parade, an online sign-in portal will be available for contact tracing. QR codes will be placed around the parade route so that you can check in also. One check-in per family is required. You are asked to stay in your family group and to wear a mask if you cannot maintain six feet of distance from other families.

The Lambton Central Petrolia Optimist Club along with the Petrolia Camera Club have confirmed that Santa Claus will be making an appearance at the Y. There will be socially distanced photos with Santa. Families are asked to wear a mask until just before the photo is taken. Anyone over 12 years of age will be required to show proof of vaccination to get in, according to the Ŷ's policies.

The Christmas season kicks off this year with Christmas in the Park Dec. 3 starting at 5 pm. The town is also compiling a "Magical Tour of Lights" for residents to visit. If your home or business has a display, you can contact the town to be included.

The town will also hold a Christmas Market, Dec. 4 from 10 am to 4 pm.

We will never forget.

SOUTHCOTT Jack McMillan

Our beloved Jack chose to accept his ancestors' invitation to cross over, peacefully on the evening of Thursday October 28 at Arbour Heights Long Term Care Home in Kingston Ontario. His 90 years of cherished inspiration will be remembered by his devoted spouse Donna Jane Marie Southcott (nee McDonald); daughters Ann, Lynn, and Mary

Jane; sons-in-law Brian, Jim, and Scott; grandchildren Christie and husband Henry, Ben, Danielle, Mitch, Megan, Michelle, Eric and wife Renée; great grand children Elena, Harry, and Paige Graham; as well as his brother Jim and sister-in-law Jackie Southcott. Born in Morpeth Ontario, first son of the Reverend Robert Earl and Jean Southcott, Jack grew up enjoying the beauty of rural communities in Southern Ontario. Graduating in 1954 with a Bachelor of Arts degree from the University of Western Ontario, Jack spent 37 and a half years making a difference with London Life, one of Canada's leading insurance companies at the time. Originally working in London Ontario, he moved his burgeoning family with every promotion spending a few years in Toronto, Halifax, and Chatham before retiring in Ottawa after 18 years as the London Life Ottawa Regional Mortgage Development Branch Manager. In 1969 Jack, along with brother Jim and his two cousins Robert and Don Southcott, took over as shareholders and directors developing the magnificent enclave community of Southcott Pines along the shores of Lake Huron in Grand Bend, Ontario. A talented athlete, in his spare time Jack enjoyed both golf and curling, becoming exceptionally proficient in both arenas. On the fairways and curling sheets in every city he lived, Jack made many lifelong friends. Ever curious, after retirement Jack and his beloved Donna travelled the world investigating the wonders of Central America, Europe, and even Japan! When not jet setting, Jack could be found quietly volunteering with several charitable organizations in his community. His family and friends will best remember Jack for his dependable quiet strength, selfless loving nature, and as the man who taught us all the profound importance of family. Jack was happiest when surrounded by his adoring extended family during holidays at his home in Southcott Pines. The image of him seated at the head of a full dinner table, arms crossed, stating sincerely and without fail how " that was the best dinner I've ever had, we are truly blessed!", will be forever indelibly stamped in the memories of his clan. A special thank you to the staff at Arbour Heights Long Term Care Home for all your tender efforts caring for Jack while in residence. Friends will be received at the James Reid Funeral Home, 1900 John Counter Blvd., Kingston, on Saturday, November 6, 2021, from 10:00 am – 10:50 am followed by a service celebrating Jack's life in the chapel at 11:00 am. A reception will be held at the conclusion of the ceremony at the Donald Gordon Centre, 421 Union St., Kingston K7L 3N6. RSVP's for the attendance of the service may be at the James Reid Funeral Home, 613-544-3411 from 9:00 am – 4:00 pm daily. Due to current Covid protocols all attendees of the visitation, ceremony and reception must show proof of double vaccination and personal ID before entry and masks are mandatory. For those who cannot attend the service please use the livestream link. ### Obituary

MIDDLETON Wendy

We are heartbroken to share that our beautiful mom, wife, friend, and grandma (Ma) has passed away on Sunday, October 31, 2021 at St. Joseph's Hospice, Sarnia. Wendy Joyce Middleton (nee Cascadden) was born November 23, 1954. She leaves behind her best friend and husband, Rolly Middleton. They shared an incredible love story for over 47 years, living proof of the verse, "Love is patient, love is kind". She also leaves behind her son Matthew Middleton, his wife Kara, their children Macie, Alec, and Kallie, her daughter Marni Middleton and her boys Adler and Colsen; her parents Dorothy and Murray Cascadden, her sisters, beloved nieces and nephews and their families, her Indiana family, and many cherished friends. Wendy was a beautiful soul. She treasured time with family, always making memories and holidays so special. Her laugh and radiant smile were infectious, and she had a gentle way of making everyone feel welcome and cared for. Her kindness and care for others was always present, even when she was weak. She had such strength, bravery, grace, and love for her family. She was very private and those closest to her understood her battle. Wendy fought hard to live and got to meet all of her grandchildren. We will miss you every second of our lives. We can take comfort in knowing your soul is with God and at peace. Our lives have been forever changed as a result of knowing your love, and going forward our lives will be forever changed learning to live without you. We would like to thank the doctors and nurses involved in Wendy's care. We are forever grateful. Thank you to the St. Joseph's Hospice and beautiful staff that assisted Wendy and our family. A memorial service will be held on Friday, November 12, 2021 at 2:00 p.m. at the Needham-Jay Funeral Home, 4059 Petrolia Line. Due to current COVID Restrictions attendance is limited to those who sign up at https://signup.com/ go/OtCstLz. The service will be live streamed at www.facebook. com/NeedhamJay. A reception celebrating Wendy's life will be at the Royal Canadian Legion at Erie St. 439 Erie St. Wyoming will follow from 3 to 6 p.m. on Friday, November 12, 2021. Proof of Vaccination and masking is required to attend and masking is required inside the Legion. As expressions of sympathy, memorial donations may be made to St. Joseph's Hospice (www.stjosephshospice.ca).

GO VAXX bus welcomed by protesters

Alex Kurial

Local Journalism Initiative

More than 50 people hopped on board with getting vaccinated during the latest stop of the GO VAXX bus in Petrolia Monday.

But not everyone was happy to see them.

The bus, which has been travelling Ontario bringing the COVID shot to different communities, parked behind the library from 11 am to 5 pm. This followed Lambton stops over the prior three days in Sarnia and Mooretown. The mobile vaccine clinic usually attracts protestors, but in Lambton, one of the Sarnia events ended early because of the standoff. The bus is equipped with freezers so the vaccines can be transported long distances across the province. People come aboard and head to the back of the bus for a shot.

Six to eight workers from different regions man the bus. Bill Gaunt, from Grey-Bruce, was team lead for the Petrolia trip, which included volunteers from Lambton and Chatham-Kent.

Chris Johnstone from Oshawa has been volunteering his weekends for the past three months to ferry the precious cargo around. He says reception to the bus is mostly positive and at times there's more demand than supply.

But the bus occasionally faces opposition too. This was especially the case during the Lambton County swing as protestors turned up at all four locations calling for the vaccines to be stopped.

In Petrolia about half a dozen people with signs shouted that the GO VAXX team was killing people and the vaccines were against God and a tool of the Devil.

A brief quarrel ensued between Gaunt and a protestor after the man repeatedly crossed barriers surrounding the bus. But after some arguing the pair separated peacefully.

The protestors were loud but ultimately outnumbered by the GO VAXX team and

Corunna's Hill St. may go on a road diet to lose a couple of lanes to bicyclists

Alex Kurial

Local Journalism Initiative

One of Corunna's main streets could soon have dedicated cycling lanes.

St. Clair Township is considering reducing Hill Street's four lane road to two lanes and claiming the outer lanes for cyclists as part of a so-called road diet to reduce traffic problems simply.

A road diet reduces the number of lanes on a roadway to improve safety or provide space for other modes of travel - like bikes.

"Many letters have been received from concerned residents regarding the overall safety of Hill Street," read a report from Paul daSilva, coordinator of engineering.

Hill Street is lined with signs asking drivers to slow down.

"A road diet could resolve a number of concerns as a way to calm traffic and provide cyclists an unimpeded lane for commuting," says daSilva.

A traffic study shows Hill Street is a "good candidate" for the road diet, according to the Ministry of Environment. They recommend any road with traffic of less than 15,000 vehicles a day should be looked at for repurposing. Hill Street carries about 7,500 vehicles a day according to the April study. daSilva acknowledged not everyone will be thrilled with the idea.

"Although we feel that the implementation of a road diet will be generally well received, similar projects in other municipalities point to the potential of strong opposition from some residents," he says.

"Generally, the loss of on-street parking is a primary concern, followed by the notion that 'if it isn't broken, then why fix it' mentality."

That's why he recommends a lengthy consultation process, starting with a survey of residents along and adjacent to Hill Street. There would also be public presentations about the concept by the township before a decision is made.

"I don't think this is going to be a fast process, I think we're looking at least a year before we want to make a final decision on this," says daSilva.

Staff will report back to council soon on what the initial survey will ask and how it will be conducted.

Mayor Steve Arnold says he looks forward to learning "a flavour of the feeling of the general population.'

The potential lane changes would stretch from Queen Street to Lyndoch Street. Staff estimate putting in the bike lanes as traffic calming measures would cost about $5,600.

Nine bottles of beer on the floor dead giveaway of drunk driver stopped in Forest

Alex Kurial

A Kerwood man's third drunk driving conviction will take him off the road for two years.

Joseph O'Rourke, 54, plead guilty in Sarnia Court to driving while more than double the legal alcohol limit at 11 in the morning. He fled police when they tried to stop him.

It was Aug. 30, 2020 when police received complaints of an erratic driver approaching Forest. He appeared drunk and had vomited on himself.

As O'Rourke entered town a waiting OPP car activated its lights and attempted to pull over the maroon Ford pickup. But O'Rourke had other ideas and sped away before suddenly turning into a laneway on Townsend Line.

Police watched him running around backyards before realizing he wasn't going to give himself up willingly. After a brief foot chase they managed to track down O'Rourke and arrest him.

A heavy smell of alcohol, glossy eyes and unsteadiness was noted. There were nine empty Busch beer bottles in his truck.

Justice Krista Leszczynski sentenced him to a $2,000 fine and a six month conditional sentence for fleeing police. He'll be banned from driving for two years. "The fact that you have been convicted of similar offences in the past, although there is a gap, is still a serious concern to this court. You have repeated that mistake, not just once or twice, and are back before the court having committed the same offence," says Leszczynski.

"Also aggravating is the fact that your readings are very high and the time of day of this offence, in the middle of the day when one would expect there would be more people on the roadway. As well, obviously your conduct following the stop by the police," she adds.

Leszczynski says O'Rourke's total punishment is more "significant and severe... because of the all too often tragic consequences that flow from drinking and driving that we are all familiar with in this particular community and across the country."

"I'm remorseful for what I've done. I'm sorry," says O'Rourke.

The first four months of the conditional sentence will be served under house arrest and the final two under curfew. O'Rourke must take counselling for alcohol abuse and can't have any alcohol during the sentence. He'll continue the counselling during his year of probation.
